DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-16 are rejected for the same reasons set forth on pages 2-5 in the office action dated 06-06-06

Response to Argument

Applicant's remarks advance that the prior art applied does not teach further switching means which can be set in dependence on an external signal. Applicant has, however, failed to define just what an external signal is. In this respect any control element in the control system which is external to the actual switch means, (which switches the current to the heating element), would teach the claimed limitations. Basically, this includes all of the ;control elements in the prior art applied, aside from the penultimate switch means. In addition, the patent to Rainey has been applied for teaching external control of the heating device. See column 8 lines 37 plus. Claim 1 only defines an off/on switch and a further switch to be controlled in dependence on an external signal. Firstly, as set forth above, the external type of signal has not been defined. In addition the use of a potentiometer or other temperature setting device would satisfy this limitation since this is an external signal and it does control the switch element, when used in combination with an ordinary on/off switch. In addition the prior art, as applied, clearly would motivate one of ordinary skill in heating control to use a remote control to control the heating, knowing the attendant benefits of remote control. Even conventional ceiling fans are remotely controlled, and remote control of your house and business appliances, is commonplace today. On page 6 of the remarks in the last paragraph, Applicants state that, "the external control signal disables the switch element in the heating current circuit and does not allow for remote c control of the dental hand piece. +Applicant should note though, that the instant claims are silent as to these limitations, and likewise silent to other limitations not set forth in the claims but discussed by Applicant, as though they were.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
